APPENDIX 1: AGM Chair's report

Financial Year 2019/2020

The two headline things to report in terms of activity were the excellent annual festival in Wigtown and an expansion of The Festival Company's engagement work within community settings in D&G throughout the year.

It is worth remembering that WFC has to generate funds from a wide range of sources, and many of these funds, including the prestigious support from Creative Scotland, provide support for both the annual festival and the year-round range of activities we provide across the region.

2019 Book Festival.

- Very smoothly run Festival with an exciting programme.
- 4% increase in box office receipts.
- Increase in audience numbers (to 29,588).
- Highlights include the very popular Map House and its Gaelic link and the themes of the Festival: the Book inspired film programme, This Epic North, and This Farming Life.
- Young people's programme (Big Wig and Wigwam) integrated into the full festival with very positive outcomes including increased audience and much more cross generational activity.

Other activities

- Second year of our European funded NPA project supporting literary tourism businesses in which we have supported nine local businesses in the region.
- Big Bang cancelled due to COVID-19.
- Day of Curiosity in partnership with University of Glasgow and the Crichton Campus. There were 151 participants, an exceptionally high number for a new event. Linked to the Year of Conversation initiative.
- Hooked, delivered Feb 2020 (20 participants).
- Appointment of Young People's Assistant July 2019.
- Care-home work and Prison programme in partnership with Open Book.
- Growth in the writer development programme including: the delivery of literature forum meetings; an effective mentoring programme; pitching sessions at WBF; Writers' Gathering (with 37 participants, the highest ever) and literature ambassadors.
- Poetry prize developments (included a new sponsor for this prize) and a new pamphlet prize.
- Support for Brave New Words.
- Board (funded by Cashback for Creativity).

Across the board there was an increase in children's related activity, particularly the under 13s, focussing on increasing access. Examples include sensory story telling with Ailie Finlay and an increase in the number of translated events to widen participation.

General update on the current financial year 20/21

I'd like to start by thanking the staff for being flexible and working hard, and unconventionally, during this last, very difficult year. Everyone has worked hard to try and ensure that the long-term finances of the company are as strong as possible, whilst keeping the Wigtown Book Festival product/output both innovative and of the highest standard.

Headline things to report in terms of activity are firstly an effective and nimble response to the crisis, secondly an excellent on-line annual festival plus all year events, and thirdly an increased support for schools.

Specific things to highlight for this current year include:

- Agile pivot of WFC when lockdown hit, moving operations online very quickly and creating new output (Wigtown Wednesdays) for our existing, and new, audiences.
- Clever use of the furlough scheme to continue operations while saving funds to support business continuity plus offering support to staff.
- The new online festival format went smoothly, allowing us to involve a broader base of authors, reach new audiences, and in general allow for more engagement.

WIGTOWN FESTIVAL COMPANY - AGM

11 February 2021

- Financial return exceeded our expectations and we thank those who attended on-line and donated. We were unsure how to monetise the digital programme, but relying on attendees' generosity was a prudent approach.
- WBF 2020 commissioned films about local bookshops to support businesses as much as possible during the festival, and also films about the saltmarsh and foraging to encourage viewers to visit in the future
- Fundraising during this period exceeded expectations
- Online Big Dog and Big Bang are launched for delivery soon in March.

In summary, the WFC financial position is currently robust due to staff working hard to reduce costs wherever possible during the pandemic and effective Board engagement.

The shape of 2021 Book Festival is as yet unknown; we will continue to monitor the government guidelines, and consider their impact on the local community. As with last year we will keep options open and make the appropriate decisions later in the year
